Human Pinball : Ice Age

Background:
A lone survivor of an exploration craft that crash landed on a remote and desolate collection of passing meteors, that have entered the solar system, the home of man.

As a flight engineer, your mission is to retrieve the 3 precious coloured spheres and plant them into the right transport receptacles, somewhere on this frozen surface. We have no maps of the surface, so you will have to search for the spheres to begin your mission. You flight suit will be sufficient for you to travel on the surface but it must not get wet! Stay away from any surface or underground fluids.

A previous expedition set up some rails to transport the spheres but have not been heard from for the past few years. If they are alive, make contact and complete the mission.

Care must be taken as the rails are designed for robots to navigate. Should you fall and get lost in the tangled nest of underground caves and gullies, you may not live to tell the tale.

Once all three spheres have been successfully recovered into their right receptacles, a rescue beacon will be turned on and a rescue ship will be sent to recover them, also your portal will start up, for the journey home. Good luck.