TOYMAKER

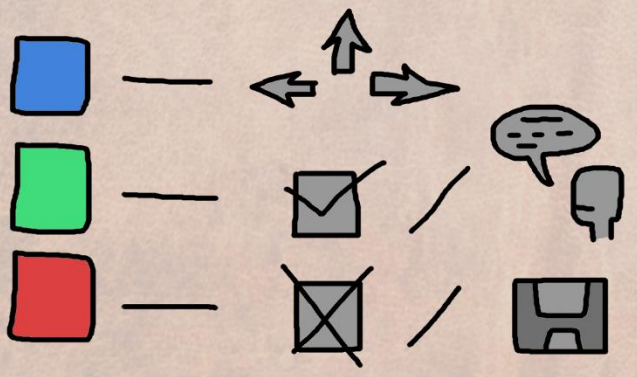

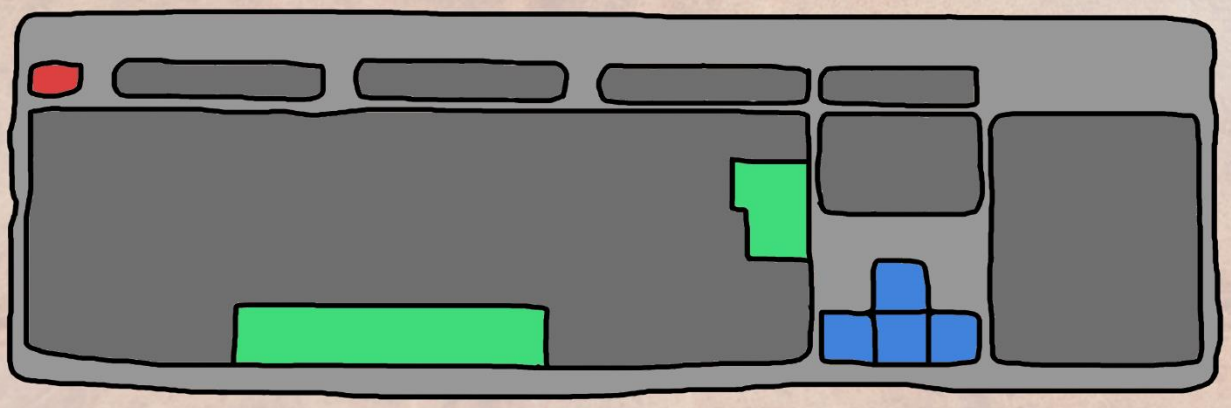

At first there were many. They came to his flock.
Then they grew fewer, as the days drew long.
Until only his servants, were the ones that remained.

The gnomes built dolls, to cage all his prey.
And the reindeer built traps, to lure them here.
Until the Gate, lost all of its faith.

CONTROLS

The Frostcrafter lived in solitude.
Tending to his garden of frost.
Then the gnomes fled the mountain.
Then they came too close.

When his children died.
When the forges burned.
Then the Frostcrafter left his solitude.
Then the frost awoke.

The reindeer grew dark and moody from work.
Until they broke the chains of their soul.
Their hearts filled with bloodlust.
From pain they found peace.

For every nightmare they had, Lussi was called.
Until she found a way out of the dark.
Their hearts fed her hunger.
In pain they were bound.

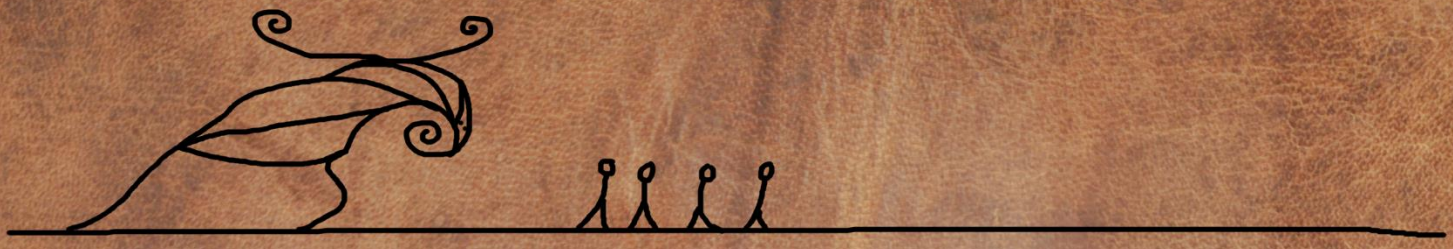

THE ELEMENTS

From death a Spirit was born. And in Darkness a Light flickered.
The Spirit intrigued the cold. And Snow came to quench its fire.
From Snow flowed water. And Root was born, to shield the storm.
The life that grew, was warm. And Frost came calling in the dark.
From frozen nights Root died. And Spirit rose again from death.
The balance was restored. In Darkness and in Light.

The Straw Goat began his eternal watch.
Shepherding the humans, in two different packs.
The Herders were born, to gather and grow.
And the Hornhunters learned, to raid and to burn.

He watched his flocks, from the winters of storm.
Keeping them safe, and ready for slaughter.
When the Toymaker came, to demand his tribute.
And the madness at first planted its seed.
